All pupils becoming six years of age between January 30, and the end of the school year will be received on January 30, 1933. Pupils entering the high school from district outside the borough should meet with the principal to discuss the course that they will elect. The principal will be in his office all day Friday, September 2, to meet all entrants to the high school from outside districts and to advise them in their selection of their classes.

Three distinct courses are offered at Newtown High School: the academic or general culture and college preparatory course; commercial course, preparing for office work and general business; and the general course, which consists of a combination of the two previous courses.

In all courses such activities as Home-room, Auditorium, and Clubs must be participated in by all pupils. Sixteen units are required for graduation and included in this number must be 4 years of English, 4 of social subjects, 2 of science and 2 of mathematics.

GAR WOOD WINS HEAT

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 3.—Proving himself once more the master showman of racing, Gar Wood in his "little piece of plumbing," Miss America X, roared to a spectacular victory over Kay Don today in the first heat of the Harmsworth Steeple classic. The British challenger, "Miss England III," appeared hopelessly outclassed. As if to give the crowd of 200,000 a spectacle worth their long wait in the chilly and rainy dawn, Wood deliberately held Miss America one mile behind the British boat until the last lap of the race, then with a tremendous burst of speed, "Miss America X" lifted her nose out of the choppy sea and thundered down the course, caught the British boat and passed her. After a few seconds more the magnificent burst of speed continued, Wood's lead widening to a mile and then a mile and a half and then the thundering speed died down and Wood proceeded leisurely to the finish line and victory.

The agents finally escaped the fury of the mob by fleeing over the roof of the hotel. State police and the fire department were called and that added hundreds more to the crowd about the hotel. The trouble all began when the agents attempted to move 46 barrels of wine.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS INVADES DOYLESTOWN

Child Taken to Abington Hospital and Put in Isolation Ward

WARNING IS ISSUED

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 3.—That dreadful disease, acute anterior poliomyelitis, more commonly known as infantile paralysis, it was learned this morning, has made its way to this borough and as a result George Nogradi, one of the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nogradi, North Clinton street, is in the isolation ward of Abington Hospital. The four-year-old child is in an institution which so far this season has treated nine other cases, one of them being from Horscham and others from Jenkintown and vicinity.

Dr. Allen H. Moore, who has charge of the case, has taken steps to prevent the spread of the disease in the family by inoculating the victim's brothers and sisters with blood from the mother and father. It is believed by scientists who have had experience in handling this disease that this inoculation affords protection to the children because of the apparent immunity conferred upon many adults.

Commenting on the spread of the disease throughout this State, Dr. Moore said this morning: "Infantile paralysis is rapidly making its way toward Doylestown and it is necessary that parents exercise the utmost care over their children. No matter how trivial a child's illness may seem, he should be put to bed immediately and watched very carefully."

It has been said that some people have been clamoring for a delay in the opening of the public schools, but it has been pointed out that this will be ineffective if at the same time the other public places, including motion picture houses, picnic resorts, parties and swimming pools are kept open to the children. It has been suggested that the children at this time of danger be kept near home.

United States medical officials in Washington are said to be alarmed over the situation. From the beginning of this year to August 13, a total of 71 cases were reported throughout the State and this was exclusive of Philadelphia. In that city alone during August there were 370 cases. The death rate during the present epidemic is said to be much lower than that in 1916.

Commenting further on the situation, Dr. Moore said: "There are some people who have a tendency to minimize the seriousness of this disease, but the public at large should not permit itself to be influenced by these (Continued on Page 4)

SHE KNOWS HER CORNS

(By "The Stroller")

A well-known business man went into a restaurant in Bristol the other day and addressing the waitress, who happens to be a young girl from a nearby farm, said:

"Have you any shoe-pegs corn?"

"No," replied the girl.

"I bet you don't know what it is," said the business man.

"Oh, yes I do," replied the girl. "I just heard the other day."

"Well, have you any golden bantam?"

"No," was the reply.

"Have you any country gentleman?"

"Yes."

"I bet you don't know what that is."

"I do so, it is a magazine," snapped the girl back in reply.

And they say she was born and raised on a farm.

Report Theft of Boat To Burlington Police

BURLINGTON, N. J., Sept. 3.—Captain Frank Gilbert and Sergeant George Bowley, of the local police force, are investigating charges made by a Bristol youth who claims his sailboat was stolen about August 1.

Carmen Mignoni, 14, of Mill street, Bristol, says his boat is now in the possession of Walter Zeminski, 109 Thompson street, Burlington, and that the canvas has been covered with tar to conceal its identity.

Zeminski was questioned by Bowley and claimed he had found the boat drifting in the river. He was told to report to Captain Gilbert last night but failed to do so.

Parents of the Bristol youth are expected to swear out a warrant for the Burlington man's arrest.

Mignoni says he found his boat tied up on the bank above the foundry wharf in East Burlington after searching for it for several weeks.

Reports of thefts from Burlington Island were also made to local police yesterday. Edward Dougherty, of 324 Dorrance street, Bristol, says that part of a leather belt was missing from the "crazy house" on the island. A large piece was cut from a belt 4½ feet wide and 150 feet long. The entire belt is valued at $900.

It was also reported that a boy was seen carrying three peach baskets full of copper from the island. Captain Gilbert is investigating the charges.

SCHOOL BOARD HEAD APPEALS FOR FUNDS

Money is Needed With Which to Purchase Shoes for Children

CAN'T USE STATE MONEY

An appeal is made today by Doron Green, president of the Bristol school board, for funds with which to purchase shoes for children, who otherwise will not be able to attend school sessions.

Mr. Green's appeal reads as follows:

"The Public School board has just been informed by the school nurse, Miss Nora Jones, who made a personal investigation of the matter, that the money appropriated by the State for the unemployed, cannot be used for purchasing anything but food.

"A large number of children are in need of shoes before they can attend school, and neither can the money collected from taxes to support the schools or the appropriation received from the State, be diverted to this use. In consequence a serious condition exists.

"Thinking some public spirited citizens might be willing to contribute to this most worthy cause, notice is hereby given, that all such contributions should be sent to the school nurse, Miss Jones, who will personally apply the money to the use for which it is contributed. Should any organization or society be willing to guarantee to raise at least one hundred dollars, through a public entertainment, card party or dance, such organization should take up the matter with the undersigned at once, and arrangements can be made to have the amount advanced, so that it can be used immediately.

"Bristol Public School Board,
DORON GREEN, President."

PROBING JUSTICE

History's first scientific attempt to find out how the machinery of litigation is working in the United States today and what can be done about it is an undertaking contemporary without time. It will seek to answer such pertinent questions as how much does it cost to dispose of a given lawsuit in court, how many days, months or years does it take and what unnecessary delay, expense and uncertainty are involved when the law is invoked to decide a civil difference?

Had these questions been answered many years ago it would have been of great profit to the public, but better late than never, especially since it is universally evident that the state of affairs suggested by them is becoming more and more aggravated.

The study is being made by the new Institute of Law at Johns Hopkins University with a committee of New York lawyers cooperating in the preliminary survey. Before the study is completed lawyers in every state of the union will have been questioned on the matters involved. An ideal condition the public would like to see develop from this survey is one in which the litigant of little means could go into into the courts on an equal footing with the powerful individual or organization. Delays, technicalities of the law, appeals to higher courts and other obstacles to speedy justice permit the rich and powerful to defeat the ends of justice.

FICKLE OPINION

Representatives of the people ought to know how to gauge public opinion, as well as how to lead it. Those who possess these accomplishments succeed in public life, the others fall by the wayside sooner or later.

The words of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, on this question are of interest to the elector as well as to the elected. He mentions the two chief human obstacles to ascertaining what public opinion really is:

"Always one's interpretation of public opinion is likely to be influenced by his personal bias or prejudice. In the absence of authentic evidence of the state of the public mind one necessarily avails of those sources of information which he believes reflective of general thought. It is in the choice of these sources that one may yield to the agencies most nearly in harmony with his own position."

These thoughts shed some light on the difficulties the lawmaker or other public official encounters when he essays to feel the public pulse. Often the zealous minority drowns the voice of the apathetic majority. The right of petition leads the legislator into fatal errors. Public opinion with feminine fickleness can change overnight. And there are always lobbyists, letter writers and committees to deceive the people's representatives.

'MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY'
THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWLEY-FRIEDL INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT

I SHOULD have known better than to bedevil myself with such questions. I have been with Thatcher Colt too many years not to know better. The man never does anything without some basis in sound reason.

Colt had seen something in that photograph which had escaped me—had escaped us all.

What could it be?

I confess I looked with new interest at the framed portrait which Captain Henry presently brought into the room. There was the same smiling, youthful face. But what else looked out at us from within the borders of the chased silver frame?

Still I could find nothing whatever.

Thatcher Colt, received the photograph from Captain Henry and with a smile sent the old fellow back to Center Street. I am sure he wished to remain. Without waiting for the door to close, the Commissioner went back to his argument.

"The final proof, gentlemen, is just now in my hands. The case has come to an end. The facts are complete. It remains only to place them before you, and to arrest the guilty person."

We looked at him like freshmen, absorbed in a lecture we found glamorous. There was a tenseness, like electricity, trembling in the air. What revelation would be uttered here in the next five minutes?

Colt held up the photograph.

"As some of you know," he went on quietly, "I was drawn to this photograph from the moment I saw it. It seemed to be the face of someone I had seen before. The features evoked a recollection in my mind. Yet for a long time I could not identify them."

"But logic settled that question, within two hours, I made a mental breakdown of that photograph. Whose eyes did it suggest? Whose mouth? Whose short, peaked ears? I got a little way with that—but I needed proof. Then I unfurled this portrait and got the name of the French photographer. By the telephone process I sent that picture to Paris and asked the chief of police to investigate."

"Meanwhile I was making other researches by cable. To my infinite surprise I learned that Lola Carewe had lived alone in London and in Paris. Who, then, was the charming old gentlewoman she had introduced to us here as her mother? Was she a stage mother, family front for nobodies, as I have heard is an old Hollywood custom?"

"Then, by a quirk of fancy, my mind went back to a moment last night in the Crystal Room of the Ritz. Two girls—cinema performers—in blue, and a dowager mother were presented. I learned that the dowager was not really the girls' mother. She was hired by the motion picture company to give the girls a family background. Such things were done. Lola Carewe had been in the movies and was thinking of going back again. Perhaps she had a hired mother, too, then—and perhaps after her marriage she found it impossible to get rid of her."

"A cable to London soon settled that. Lola's mother died immediately after Lola's birth. These reports confirmed my suspicions. Lola had entered the United States alone."

"I thus reasoned—and correctly—that the old lady we knew as Mrs. Carewe was a fake. She was an actress, hired to play the part. What was her hold on Lola? Perhaps she had blackmailed Lola—the blackmailer blackmailed—and thus held on to her job. But being a sentimentalist she insisted on having a plain room, such as she had always known."

"The two of them must have known a lot about each other!"

Colt's voice was now very clear and distinct. He had told "Mrs. Carewe" to keep her door open. I had no doubt that she could hear distinctly every word that was said. But there was no outburst, not even the sound of crying. Apparently, the old woman was taking it with the immobility of a statue.

"This altered the situation," Colt went on, his voice resonant and clear. "Even the most hardened policeman hesitates to accuse a mother of murdering her own child. But we were being more and more forced to that conclusion. There are no miracles. There were no secret doors. From the very first Dougherty had said it was an inside job—and from the very first I have believed him. Moreover, I had put my hand on the old woman's head—and found that her hair was wet!"

"It was then that the information was received that gave me what I might call the impelling clue."

"M. Dupont stated in his wire that the father and mother of Basil Boucher had been in the business of supplying hospitals with specimens!"

"There was the connection established over what had seemed to me an abyss in my reasoning. How could an old woman, hired to play a part of mother, know anything about scorpions from a remote region of Mexico?"

"There seemed to be no answer to that question. But now! The skies cleared in my head. I saw the likeness—of course it was clear!"

The same sharp-pointed ears, high cheek-bones, slanting eyes—why had I not immediately tied them together? I remembered my puzzlement that no dead insect was found near the body of Lola. Then I remembered who had knelt over her ministering when first we found her. I remembered, too, that when Lola shrieked, all rushed to her assistance. But Mrs. Carewe arrived late—with the skill of a conjurer, she had taken advantage of that misdirection, when all attention was concentrated elsewhere, to haul in Christine's body and leave it on the floor. And I recalled, too, how she had accused Rowland in her sleep—the stenographic record of Miss Lox shows that conversation was too direct, too lucid, to be a part of a dream phantasm. "I had one more job to do. I called M. Dupont on the telephone and asked him to go back to that photographer—to ask him if there were any other pictures of Boucher—any of his father and mother—and wire them back to me as fast as the telephone wires could make it. Or to send me the cartes d'identite."

"I have just received a picture from Paris. Captain Henry brought it to me, just as it was developed off the receiving machine. It shows a boy and his mother. I want you to take one look."

We crowded around him. The sight made us gasp.

Mother and son had been taken together; she seated in an old-fashioned rococo chair and he—Basil Boucher—standing reverently behind her, the woman we knew as Mrs. Carewe.

"Revenge!" cried Thatcher Colt. "For the death of that boy, whom she regarded as destroyed, body and soul, by Lola. Lola had never seen her. Her path was long and devious. She got the job—and waited long. She even went so far as to involve Lola in her plans. I believe she made Lola buy the scorpions which killed her, having first tempted her into planning murder—of Guy Everett and Christine. Only a mind maddened by grief could plot so long and so stealthily—delaying the pleasure of murder—and kill an innocent girl like Christine who probably had accidentally learned the truth. Two deaths, to revenge the ruin of a boy in France years ago—"

There was the sound of a horrible rattling as if life and death were struggling in a human throat. We heard the voice of Dorothy Lox remonstrating—noise of a struggle. Then the sound of running feet, the crash of glass, twenty-three floors above the street, a stifled cry, and a gust of cold wind.

The killer of Lola and Christine would never stand trial!

ARTICLE VIII.

THE TAYLOR OAK

The Taylor oak, states Mr. Moon, is "Probably the grandest specimen of white oak in Bucks county. The branch formation is typical of the trees grown in the open as differing from those which were probably forest trees when young."

Nineteen feet one inch of tape is just able to gird its huge trunk; while the branches from tip to tip on either side record at 118 feet.

Well over four centuries has it been since the acorn was planted for this tree, the age being approximated at about 437 years.

A short distance from the Taylor oak is located a broken old button-wood of gigantic size, the last remaining live branch blowing down a few weeks ago. The circumference of this tree is 20 feet, four inches.

EDDINGTON A. A. WINS OVER ANDALUSIA NINE

Eddington A. A. defeated Andalusia, Thursday night, 8-0. Kramer, Eddington's new-comer, was sent to the mound and held Andalusia to two hits. He did not give a base on balls and set down seven opponents on strikes. Kramer had States, another new star, as his catcher. These two took like a real find. Pennock had three hits for the victors, while Ferro and B. Tomlinson with one hit apiece, was all Andalusia could collect off the slants of Kramer.

FORMER LOCAL PADDLER NOW COACHES CLUB

Al Bauer, who for many years paddled racing canoes under the colors of the Young Men's Association, has for the past two years been coaching the Cacawa Canoe Club at Tacony with great success. Last year the Cacawa Club won the New York State Championships at Jones Beach, L. I., and then captured the National Championship of the Middle States Canoe Racing Association.

This year, with only five active paddlers, the Cacawa Canoe Club finished third in the Nationals, but they won three of the seven senior championship events. The Cacawa quad doubles crew of Cimokowski, Shad, Haas and Wilkie are undefeated this season and just last week won the national championship event at Washington, D. C.; while Haas and Wilkie paired up to win the tandem double blade championship.

This season marks the first time in eight years that the crack Pendleton Canoe Club four of New York City has met defeat in any regatta and the Cacawa Club beat them twice.

Not to be outdone by his charges, "Al" Bauer and "Bill" Weisen went out and captured the senior championship tilt at Washington, this making the second straight year this team has won that event.

On Saturday, September 10th, the paddlers of the Cacawa Canoe Club will be the guests of the Anchor Yacht Club here, and these national championship crews will give exhibitions of their skill.

Ideas. The disease is extremely serious and parents should exercise the utmost care of their children at this time.

Several weeks ago Dr. Moore issued a call for volunteers to supply blood to be given persons suffering from this disease. At that time the response of persons who previously had been victims of the disease was quite generous, but the supply given at that time is about exhausted and it is likely there will be another call for volunteers.

County Medical Director Dr. Charles W. Many this morning stated that he had suggested to the board of managers of the George School, that they postpone its opening until the epidemic subsides, as the school gets about 20 per cent of its students from Philadelphia. The officials of the school will hold a meeting next Tuesday evening, when it is likely they will act upon the suggestion made by Dr. Many.

The County Medical Director said he does not see any necessity for postponing the opening of the schools unless conditions in this locality became worse. He has advised that parents keep their children from the Philadelphia area for the present.

It was suggested by Dr. Many that persons frequenting swimming pools exercise great care, particularly in reference to getting water into the ears. He suggested that these persons take some means toward protecting the ears from the water.

Commenting on the health conditions in general throughout the county, Dr. Many said they are good. There are, however, three cases of typhoid fever in the Ivyland section, but it is believed that the source of the trouble has been located and efforts will be taken to remedy them. It was learned that the three persons suffering from this disease had procured water from the same source.
